Technical opinion on whether EN 13501-1 is consistent with ČSN-EN 13501-1.

Lukasiewicz Research Network is accredited by PCA (Polskie Centrum Akredytacji – Polish Center of Accreditation). All the methods according to EN 13501-1 reaction to fire are within the scope of accreditation. PCA is a signatory to the ILAC MRA. Thanks to this status, PCA can use the ILAC MRA mark and issue accreditations that are mutually recognised by other national accreditation bodies that are signatories to the Agreement. Institute accreditation number is AB054. It can be verified and confirmed what is the scope of accredited methods on PCA government website:

<https://www.pca.gov.pl/akredytowane-podmioty/akredytacje-aktywne/laboratoria-badawcze/AB%20054,podmiot.html>

What is more Institute is also a notified body and reaction to fire tests are within the scope of this notification. Notification number is 1487. It can be verified on the European Commission site:

<https://webgate.ec.europa.eu/single-market-compliance-space/notified-bodies/notifications/1013509?organizationVersion=17>

I hereby confirm that the test method specified in EN 13501-1 is fully consistent with the method indicated in ČSN EN 13501-1. The standard ČSN EN 13501-1 is the national implementation of the European standard EN 13501-1 in the Czech Republic, and its content is identical to the European version. This means that tests carried out in accordance with EN 13501-1 meet the requirements of ČSN EN 13501-1 and are equivalent in terms of scope, testing procedures, and classification criteria.
